Aims and Scope

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is an open access multi-disciplinary journal of linguistics. We welcome contributions within any theoretical, experimental or applied approach. Our goal is to promote research on the diverse aspects of the world's languages along three dimensions:

1. Languages in space (e.g., psychological, neurobiological, geopolitical, sociological, and educational perspectives).
2. Languages in time (e.g., evolutionary, real-time processing, acquisitional and life-span developmental perspectives).
3. Languages in interaction (e.g., perspectives from research on language contact, language mixing, cross-language and cross-modal influences, cross-cultural communication and translation).

Areas of Interest:

- Theoretical and experimental linguistics
- Psycholinguistics
- Neurolinguistics
- Sociolinguistics
- Contact Linguistics
- Language acquisition
- Language pathology
- Bi/multilingualism
- Translation
- Languages and the media
